Practice Exam

Back «

Question 1 of 134
Item shrm5657

When discussing a pay increase with the HR manager, an employee suggests that the employee's higher performance this year should result in a higher pay increase than last year. Which theory is most consistent with the employee's suggestion?

Answers

- ○ Procedural justice
- ○ Equity
- ○ Self-efficacy
- ◉ Expectancy

Practice Exam

Back «

Question 2 of 134
Item shrm5679-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A division VP requests the HR manager proceed with hiring the VP's nephew. The HR manager learns that the nephew has not been interviewed by the hiring manager, which is one of the formal hiring procedures. When the HR manager asks the hiring manager why an interview was not conducted, the hiring manager replies that the VP directly asked the hiring manager to hire the nephew. After learning this, the HR manager denies the nephew the job for failing to meet formal hiring protocols. A few days after the rejection notice is sent, the VP calls the HR manager to explain the nephew does not need to be interviewed. In response, the HR manager states that, according to company policy, all applicants must go through formal hiring procedures.

The HR manager learns that there have been many cases where employees responsible for hiring decisions have not followed company hiring policies. Which action should the HR manager take to best discontinue the hiring policy violations?

Answers

- ○ Increase the severity of disciplinary actions when failing to follow company hiring policies.
- ○ Email an announcement to relevant employees of the repercussions for failing to follow company hiring policies.
- ◉ Create a mandatory training program for hiring managers on company hiring policies.
- ○ Write a memo to all employees responsible for hiring decisions outlining the hiring policy in detail.

Question 3 of 134
Item shrm5679-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A division VP requests the HR manager proceed with hiring the VP's nephew. The HR manager learns that the nephew has not been interviewed by the hiring manager, which is one of the formal hiring procedures. When the HR manager asks the hiring manager why an interview was not conducted, the hiring manager replies that the VP directly asked the hiring manager to hire the nephew. After learning this, the HR manager denies the nephew the job for failing to meet formal hiring protocols. A few days after the rejection notice is sent, the VP calls the HR manager to explain the nephew does not need to be interviewed. In response, the HR manager states that, according to company policy, all applicants must go through formal hiring procedures.

The HR manager wants to find out if other employees have been pressured to violate company policy by members of executive leadership. Which action should the HR manager take to best determine if executive influence correlates with employee policy violations?

Answers

- ○ Identify the hiring managers of employees who are relatives of executive leadership to see if there is a similar hiring trend.
- ○ Invite hiring managers to report any unethical influences from executive leadership with an assurance that there will not be punishment even if they were given a similar directive.
- ◉ Investigate the current and past instances of similar policy violations to identify patterns.
- ○ Administer anonymous surveys to all employees asking about executive leadership's adherence to company policies.

Question 4 of 134
Item shrm5679-3

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A division VP requests the HR manager proceed with hiring the VP's nephew. The HR manager learns that the nephew has not been interviewed by the hiring manager, which is one of the formal hiring procedures. When the HR manager asks the hiring manager why an interview was not conducted, the hiring manager replies that the VP directly asked the hiring manager to hire the nephew. After learning this, the HR manager denies the nephew the job for failing to meet formal hiring protocols. A few days after the rejection notice is sent, the VP calls the HR manager to explain the nephew does not need to be interviewed. In response, the HR manager states that, according to company policy, all applicants must go through formal hiring procedures.

The HR manager is approached again by the VP, who requests to take responsibility for the nephew's hiring. Which action should the HR manager take in response to the VP's request?

Answers

- (●) Email the VP documents outlining the company's hiring policy.
- ( ) Meet with the hiring manager to ensure an interview is scheduled without telling the VP.
- ( ) Recommend the hiring manager conduct the interview in accordance with policy.
- ( ) Request the VP get approval from the CEO before hiring the nephew.

Question 5 of 134
Item shrm5677-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

An HR director at a not-for-profit organization receives a call from the customer relations manager claiming the operations manager is working a second job that conflicts with the organization's mission. The customer relations manager explains that customer relations employees are connected to the operations manager on social media. The employees report that the operations manager is posting images and messages on social media to promote the second job and develop a customer base. The employees are concerned because the operations manager frequently tries to sell them products related to the second job. While the employees believe this is unethical, they do not want to upset the operations manager. Although the operations manager uses an alias on social media, the customer relations manager is concerned the organization's credibility is at risk. The organization does not have a policy that governs employees' use of social media outside of work, nor does it have a policy that restricts employees from holding second jobs. However, upon hire, employees sign an agreement stating they will report potential conflicts of interest as soon as the conflict is known or suspected.

The HR director asks the IT department to audit the operations manager's work computer and discovers the operations manager is using the computer to send emails related to the second job during work hours. Which action should the HR director take next?

Answers

- ( ) Instruct the IT department to continue monitoring the operations manager's computer usage.
- ( ) Advise the operations manager to use a personal computer for business related to the second job.
- (●) Ask the IT department to document the audit findings.
- ( ) Notify the organization's leadership about the operations manager's computer usage.

Question 6 of 134
Item shrm5677-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

An HR director at a not-for-profit organization receives a call from the customer relations manager claiming the operations manager is working a second job that conflicts with the organization's mission. The customer relations manager explains that customer relations employees are connected to the operations manager on social media. The employees report that the operations manager is posting images and messages on social media to promote the second job and develop a customer base. The employees are concerned because the operations manager frequently tries to sell them products related to the second job. While the employees believe this is unethical, they do not want to upset the operations manager. Although the operations manager uses an alias on social media, the customer relations manager is concerned the organization's credibility is at risk. The organization does not have a policy that governs employees' use of social media outside of work, nor does it have a policy that restricts employees from holding second jobs. However, upon hire, employees sign an agreement stating they will report potential conflicts of interest as soon as the conflict is known or suspected.

The customer relations manager tells the HR director that the customer relations department employees have additional, unreported concerns about the operations manager. The customer relations manager is worried the employees will quit if these unreported concerns are not addressed. How should the HR director respond?

Answers

- (●) Offer to engage a third-party consultant to meet with the employees individually to discuss their concerns.
- ( ) Advise the customer relations manager to encourage the employees to share all their concerns with HR.
- ( ) Notify the operations manager that some employees are uncomfortable with the operations manager's social media posts.
- ( ) Administer an anonymous survey to the employees to obtain feedback about the operations manager's behavior.

Question 7 of 134
Item shrm5680-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A private, family-owned manufacturing company currently employs 25 individuals and one HR representative handling personnel issues. Recently, a manufacturing employee complained to the HR representative after experiencing workplace harassment from the manager and other employees on the manufacturing line. Several weeks later, a new employee working on the production line with flammable materials complained to his manager that he felt overheated as a result of wearing protective equipment over religious garments. According to the employee, the manager responded to this complaint by insisting the employee remove the religious garments. After looking into both employees' claims, the HR representative learns that both employees who filed HR complaints share the same production line manager. During this time, the CEO announces plans to expand production by 20% over the next three years.

The production line manager learns about the complaints to HR and requests both employees be terminated, citing that both employees' current behavior is distracting other workers on the production line. Which action should the HR representative take?

Answers

- ○ Ask the production line manager to provide further justification for termination.
- ◉ Discuss with the production line manager why terminating the employees is inappropriate.
- ○ Change the shift schedule so that the two employees no longer work together.
- ○ Explain to the production line manager that as long as the employees are effectively performing their job the HR representative cannot terminate them.

Question 8 of 134
Item shrm5680-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A private, family-owned manufacturing company currently employs 25 individuals and one HR representative handling personnel issues. Recently, a manufacturing employee complained to the HR representative after experiencing workplace harassment from the manager and other employees on the manufacturing line. Several weeks later, a new employee working on the production line with flammable materials complained to his manager that he felt overheated as a result of wearing protective equipment over religious garments. According to the employee, the manager responded to this complaint by insisting the employee remove the religious garments. After looking into both employees' claims, the HR representative learns that both employees who filed HR complaints share the same production line manager. During this time, the CEO announces plans to expand production by 20% over the next three years.

After a meeting to discuss these complaints, the CEO tasks the HR representative to improve and promote inclusivity within the company. Which action should the HR representative take?

Answers

- ○ Hold a companywide meeting to talk with employees about the value of a diverse workforce.
- ○ Enroll the production line manager who was implicated in the complaints in bias and sensitivity training.
- ○ Draft a company policy outlining inclusive behaviors all employees must follow.
- ◉ Meet with the production line managers to train them on how to instill a culture of inclusion within their teams.

Question 9 of 134
Item shrm5709

Which strategy is most effective in setting employees' expectations of privacy in the workplace?

Answers

- ○ Inform employees that communications are not secure and activity will be monitored.
- ○ Let employees know that illegal substance use is grounds for termination.
- ○ Place video surveillance cameras in visible areas around the workplace.
- ◉ Establish an anonymous hotline and encourage employees to report workplace safety violations.

Question 10 of 134
Item shrm5724-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

Three years ago, several key staff members from one department in a small company resigned unexpectedly. The department is currently managed by one of the company's VPs. The VP delegates all staff supervision to the department's director, and the VP considers this director to be a top performer. However, the director has received three written warnings for unprofessional behavior over the past two years and has continued to engage in inappropriate behavior. Recently, HR was contacted by several employees from outside the department who claimed to have overheard the director shouting at and disrespecting other employees. The HR manager decides to open an investigation.

The HR manager meets privately with the VP to discuss the investigation into the director's behavior. The VP tells HR that an investigation is not necessary because the new staff are being too sensitive. How should the HR manager respond?

Answers

- ○ Advise the VP that the director's behavior is unprofessional even if the VP thinks that new staff are being too sensitive.
- ◉ Share the company's values with the VP to suggest why it is important to conduct an investigation.
- ○ Suggest the VP get to know the new staff better before accusing them of being too sensitive.
- ○ Explain that the number of written warnings given to the director is indicative of poor performance patterns.

Question 11 of 134
Item shrm5724-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

Three years ago, several key staff members from one department in a small company resigned unexpectedly. The department is currently managed by one of the company's VPs. The VP delegates all staff supervision to the department's director, and the VP considers this director to be a top performer. However, the director has received three written warnings for unprofessional behavior over the past two years and has continued to engage in inappropriate behavior. Recently, HR was contacted by several employees from outside the department who claimed to have overheard the director shouting at and disrespecting other employees. The HR manager decides to open an investigation.

The HR manager learns from another employee that several employees who resigned feared retaliation if they reported the director's behavior. How should the HR manager respond?

Answers

- ○ Administer an anonymous survey to ask employees what HR can do to make them feel safe when filing complaints.
- ○ Meet with the current employees who filed complaints to ask if they fear retaliation.
- ○ Increase employee awareness of internal policies prohibiting retaliation.
- ◉ Contact the employees who resigned to ask for details about their departure.

Question 12 of 134
Item shrm5724-3

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

Three years ago, several key staff members from one department in a small company resigned unexpectedly. The department is currently managed by one of the company's VPs. The VP delegates all staff supervision to the department's director, and the VP considers this director to be a top performer. However, the director has received three written warnings for unprofessional behavior over the past two years and has continued to engage in inappropriate behavior. Recently, HR was contacted by several employees from outside the department who claimed to have overheard the director shouting at and disrespecting other employees. The HR manager decides to open an investigation.

The HR manager meets privately with the director to discuss the complaints, but the director becomes hostile, denies behaving inappropriately, and accuses the employees of lying. How should the HR manager respond?

Answers

- ○ Suspend the director for the remainder of the week and prohibit contact with any staff members.
- ◉ Tell the director that HR wants to hear all sides of the story before coming to conclusions.
- ○ Invite the VP to join the meeting to witness the director's hostile behavior.
- ○ Remind the director that HR has three written warnings documenting the director's unprofessional behavior.

Question 13 of 134
Item shrm5659

An HR department creates a phased retirement program to encourage employees nearing retirement to gradually reduce their working hours rather than abruptly leave the company. Which benefit does the program provide to early- and mid-career employees?

Answers

- ○ Reduction in the stress of retirement
- ◉ Transfer of institutional knowledge
- ○ More time to recruit replacements
- ○ Greater promotion opportunities

Question 14 of 134
Item shrm5673-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A large poultry company is expanding operations into new countries. Before deciding to expand, company owners confirmed that members of the management team were willing to temporarily work in regional offices located in different countries. Each regional office will be directed by one member of the home office's management team for a period of two years while new, permanent management for each regional office is recruited and trained. Prior to selecting locations for the regional offices, the company hired consultants from each country to provide assistance. The company's owners are pleased with the performance of several of the consultants and want the HR manager to convert as many of these consultants as possible into full-time employees. In addition, the HR manager is asked to oversee the expatriation of members of the home office's management team.

Which action should the HR manager recommend to prepare each manager from the home office to work in the regional offices?

Answers

- ○ Train each manager on collaborative negotiation techniques so they can constructively address negotiation challenges in the regional office.
- ○ Reassure each manager that the home office will begin planning for the manager's next assignment at least three to six months before returning home.
- ○ Allow each manager time to shadow someone from the regional office to get accustomed to cultural norms.
- ◉ Offer social training to familiarize each manager with local customs and expectations for social interactions.

Question 15 of 134
Item shrm5673-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A large poultry company is expanding operations into new countries. Before deciding to expand, company owners confirmed that members of the management team were willing to temporarily work in regional offices located in different countries. Each regional office will be directed by one member of the home office's management team for a period of two years while new, permanent management for each regional office is recruited and trained. Prior to selecting locations for the regional offices, the company hired consultants from each country to provide assistance. The company's owners are pleased with the performance of several of the consultants and want the HR manager to convert as many of these consultants as possible into full-time employees. In addition, the HR manager is asked to oversee the expatriation of members of the home office's management team.

Of the managers willing to relocate to regional offices, how should the HR manager determine which managers to send?

Answers

- ○ Base the decision on job performance and seniority.
- ○ Collaborate with local consultants from each country to identify region-specific requirements.
- ○ Conduct a focus group with the management team to identify challenges related to the expansion.
- ◉ Assign projects to the managers to complete in their prospective country and assess their performance.

Question 16 of 134
Item shrm5683

Which of Hofstede's cultural dimensions explains how human inequality is viewed within a society?

Answers

- ◉ Masculinity versus femininity
- ○ Strong versus weak uncertainty avoidance
- ○ Individualism versus collectivism
- ○ Large versus small power distance

Question 17 of 134
Item shrm5712

The new CEO of a global organization wants to learn more about the different cultures and customs of the communities the company represents. Which approach will be most beneficial to the CEO?

Answers

- ○ Conducting research about the communities through online seminars
- ◉ Requesting time to travel to the organization's other sites for cultural immersion
- ○ Hiring a personal training consultant who is familiar with the cultures of other communities
- ○ Acknowledging and addressing known stereotypes that the CEO possesses

Question 18 of 134
Item shrm5731-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A large company is struggling with frustrations between hourly workers and front-line supervisors. The supervisors conduct performance reviews for the hourly workers. Each supervisor is responsible for reviewing between 30 and 40 employees, and the performance reviews take several months to complete. Supervisors have little incentive to finish reviews on time, as completion of the performance reviews is not tied to any increases in the supervisors' pay. Hourly workers now mistrust supervisors' reviews, as performance evaluations determine hourly pay increases and promotion potential, but supervisors have not been receptive to recommendations for providing detailed feedback on the hourly workers' performance. The HR representative is tasked with ensuring the most recent round of reviews is completed with detailed feedback on time, addressing process improvements, and improving relations between the supervisors and hourly workers.

Some hourly workers claim that their front-line supervisor provides higher-quality performance review feedback for employees from a specific employee sub-group. An investigation of the supervisor's most recent reviews indicates these claims appear true. Which action should the HR representative take first to address this issue?

Answers

- (●) Coach the supervisor on ways to provide high-quality feedback to all employees to avoid perceptions of bias.
- ( ) Select high-quality feedback examples from other supervisors for the front-line supervisor to use as a guide.
- ( ) Recommend the supervisor go through refresher training on the performance review and feedback process.
- ( ) Report the supervisor to management for failing to provide adequate performance reviews for all supervised employees.

Question 19 of 134
Item shrm5731-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A large company is struggling with frustrations between hourly workers and front-line supervisors. The supervisors conduct performance reviews for the hourly workers. Each supervisor is responsible for reviewing between 30 and 40 employees, and the performance reviews take several months to complete. Supervisors have little incentive to finish reviews on time, as completion of the performance reviews is not tied to any increases in the supervisors' pay. Hourly workers now mistrust supervisors' reviews, as performance evaluations determine hourly pay increases and promotion potential, but supervisors have not been receptive to recommendations for providing detailed feedback on the hourly workers' performance. The HR representative is tasked with ensuring the most recent round of reviews is completed with detailed feedback on time, addressing process improvements, and improving relations between the supervisors and hourly workers.

Supervisors have expressed challenges with providing individualized feedback. The HR representative knows managers in the company with extensive experience providing individualized feedback. Which action should the HR representative take to connect managers with supervisors?

Answers

- ( ) Set up weekly check-ins between managers and supervisors during the performance review period.
- (●) Facilitate a workshop between managers and supervisors on providing individualized feedback.
- ( ) Develop an internal webpage as a repository for sharing information on feedback among managers and supervisors.
- ( ) Ask managers to provide a list of common issues with individualized feedback and recommendations to supervisors.

Question 20 of 134
Item shrm5731-3

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A large company is struggling with frustrations between hourly workers and front-line supervisors. The supervisors conduct performance reviews for the hourly workers. Each supervisor is responsible for reviewing between 30 and 40 employees, and the performance reviews take several months to complete. Supervisors have little incentive to finish reviews on time, as completion of the performance reviews is not tied to any increases in the supervisors' pay. Hourly workers now mistrust supervisors' reviews, as performance evaluations determine hourly pay increases and promotion potential, but supervisors have not been receptive to recommendations for providing detailed feedback on the hourly workers' performance. The HR representative is tasked with ensuring the most recent round of reviews is completed with detailed feedback on time, addressing process improvements, and improving relations between the supervisors and hourly workers.

The HR representative determines that changes need to be made to the performance review schedule. Which plan should the HR representative propose to balance supervisors' workloads and the company's desire for quality reviews that assist hourly workers?

Answers

- ( ) Hire contracted staff to work with supervisors to ensure reviews are completed on time and up to quality standards.
- ( ) Block out dedicated time in the supervisors' work schedules to devote to performance reviews.
- (●) Simplify the performance review process by reducing the number of questions.
- ( ) Group each of the supervisors' performance reviews into small batches with shorter deadlines throughout the year.

Question 21 of 134
Item shrm5675-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A team is assembled to streamline the organization's current HRIS processes. The HR generalist is asked by the HR director to map departments' current recruitment and onboarding processes to ensure the HRIS can be updated to better meet organizational needs. A few months into the project, a team member who is responsible for testing the HRIS unexpectedly takes leave for several weeks. The HR generalist is asked by the HR director to assume the responsibilities of the team member and lead the testing of the HRIS. Additionally, the organization is currently laying off a large percentage of its workforce, and the HR generalist has responsibilities associated with those layoffs. The HR generalist begins to feel overwhelmed.

The HR generalist plans to meet with several employees to gather information about how they use the HRIS. However, due to ongoing layoffs, the employees are hesitant to provide information to the HR generalist because they fear it will lead to their replacement. Which action should the HR generalist take?

Answers

- (●) Explain to the employees the purpose of the project and that participation is unrelated to the layoffs.
- ( ) Inform the employees that providing input will ultimately make their jobs easier because it will lead to HRIS improvements.
- ( ) Invite the HR director to attend the meetings to encourage the reluctant employees to participate.
- ( ) Suggest to the employees that their willingness to help with the project will reflect favorably on them.

Question 22 of 134
Item shrm5675-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A team is assembled to streamline the organization's current HRIS processes. The HR generalist is asked by the HR director to map departments' current recruitment and onboarding processes to ensure the HRIS can be updated to better meet organizational needs. A few months into the project, a team member who is responsible for testing the HRIS unexpectedly takes leave for several weeks. The HR generalist is asked by the HR director to assume the responsibilities of the team member and lead the testing of the HRIS. Additionally, the organization is currently laying off a large percentage of its workforce, and the HR generalist has responsibilities associated with those layoffs. The HR generalist begins to feel overwhelmed.

The team decides that the HRIS updates should be piloted with a small group of employees prior to full implementation. Which action should the HR generalist take to ensure the pilot is successful?

Answers

- ( ) Request employees with a range of familiarity with the HRIS participate in the pilot.
- (●) Ask managers to suggest team members to participate in the HRIS pilot.
- ( ) Suggest the HRIS updates be piloted with the employees who use the HRIS most frequently.
- ( ) Recommend the HRIS updates be piloted within the HR team first.

Question 23 of 134
Item shrm5675-3

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A team is assembled to streamline the organization's current HRIS processes. The HR generalist is asked by the HR director to map departments' current recruitment and onboarding processes to ensure the HRIS can be updated to better meet organizational needs. A few months into the project, a team member who is responsible for testing the HRIS unexpectedly takes leave for several weeks. The HR generalist is asked by the HR director to assume the responsibilities of the team member and lead the testing of the HRIS. Additionally, the organization is currently laying off a large percentage of its workforce, and the HR generalist has responsibilities associated with those layoffs. The HR generalist begins to feel overwhelmed.

A manager informs the HR generalist that employees are asking when they will receive notice about the impending layoffs. The HR generalist has been busy with the HRIS testing and has not finished tasks related to the layoff communication. How should the HR generalist respond to the manager?

Answers

- ( ) Tell the manager that employees will be notified about the layoffs once final decisions have been made.
- ( ) Tell the manager to make every effort to keep employees focused on their work during this time.
- ( ) Explain to the manager that other responsibilities have taken priority.
- (●) Provide the manager with an estimated timeline of when employees can expect to be notified about the layoffs.

Question 24 of 134
Item shrm5678-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

Recently, a doctor in a large hospital met with an HR generalist and shared the details of an interpersonal conflict the doctor had with a nurse. The doctor later finds out that others in the organization know about the conflict because the HR generalist discussed it with another non-HR employee. Rumors begin to circulate among the employees about the doctor and the nurse. The doctor comes into the HR director's office and furiously demands to know what is going to be done about the situation and demands that the HR generalist be fired.

How should the HR director respond to the doctor?

Answers

- ○ Assure the doctor that the situation will be investigated, but that he cannot give details due to policy.
- ◉ Schedule a meeting with the doctor and the HR generalist at a later date to discuss the situation.
- ○ Ask the doctor additional questions to more fully understand the details of the situation.
- ○ Ask the doctor to calm down and come back to discuss the situation at another time.

Question 25 of 134
Item shrm5678-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

Recently, a doctor in a large hospital met with an HR generalist and shared the details of an interpersonal conflict the doctor had with a nurse. The doctor later finds out that others in the organization know about the conflict because the HR generalist discussed it with another non-HR employee. Rumors begin to circulate among the employees about the doctor and the nurse. The doctor comes into the HR director's office and furiously demands to know what is going to be done about the situation and demands that the HR generalist be fired.

Which action should the HR manager take to ensure that rumors surrounding the doctor's conflict with the nurse do not continue to circulate within the hospital?

Answers

- ○ Ask the CEO to email the company requesting that the spreading of rumors stop.
- ◉ Hold meetings with each team to explain the impact that spreading rumors has on the organization.
- ○ Meet with managers to ask them to identify and stop rumors circulating within each of their teams.
- ○ Recommend that the CEO offer the doctor a transfer to another part of the organization in a different location.

Question 26 of 134
Item shrm5678-3

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

Recently, a doctor in a large hospital met with an HR generalist and shared the details of an interpersonal conflict the doctor had with a nurse. The doctor later finds out that others in the organization know about the conflict because the HR generalist discussed it with another non-HR employee. Rumors begin to circulate among the employees about the doctor and the nurse. The doctor comes into the HR director's office and furiously demands to know what is going to be done about the situation and demands that the HR generalist be fired.

The HR director discovers that the HR generalist was feeling overwhelmed handling multiple employee complaints and sought the advice of another employee on how to handle the issue. Which action should the HR director take to ensure HR employees are empowered to resolve employee conflicts effectively?

Answers

- ◉ Hold cross-departmental team-building activities to help build trust between HR employees and other departments.
- ○ Provide ongoing training to HR employees on resolving different types of HR issues.
- ○ Realign the job duties of each HR team member based on each team member's individual strengths.
- ○ Hold a daily HR team meeting to discuss issues HR employees are currently dealing with.

Question 27 of 134
Item shrm5691

Which give-and-take decision-making process involves independent parties with different preferences?

Answers

- ○ Bargaining
- ◉ Negotiation
- ○ Diversity management
- ○ Conflict resolution

Question 28 of 134
Item shrm5728-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A social services organization recently hired a new HR manager to address a long-standing problem in one of its small satellite offices. The office is staffed by a 15-person volunteer workforce that provides client services, and a single, paid administrative assistant is onsite to provide support. The volunteer staff report to an onsite volunteer office manager but the administrative assistant's direct supervisor is in a different office 120 miles away. In the last three years, the volunteer staff have complained to the office manager numerous times about the administrative assistant's poor performance and unpleasant attitude, but the complaints were never addressed or documented in the administrative assistant's personnel file. Morale among the volunteers is low and client service quality has been declining steadily for months. Due to the distance between the offices, the supervisor has never directly observed the administrative assistant's job performance. However, at the volunteer office manager's suggestion, the supervisor recently placed the administrative assistant on a corrective action plan to address a lack of computer skills.

The HR manager believes the problem could be resolved by improving relationships among the office staff members. Which action should the HR manager take?

Answers

- (●) Volunteer at the office for one day to observe the staff members' interactions.
- ( ) Send an email to the office staff identifying HR's expectations for professionalism at work.
- ( ) Conduct a focus group with the office staff to discuss their interpersonal conflicts.
- ( ) Invite each office staff member to speak privately with HR about interpersonal issues at work.

Question 29 of 134
Item shrm5728-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A social services organization recently hired a new HR manager to address a long-standing problem in one of its small satellite offices. The office is staffed by a 15-person volunteer workforce that provides client services, and a single, paid administrative assistant is onsite to provide support. The volunteer staff report to an onsite volunteer office manager but the administrative assistant's direct supervisor is in a different office 120 miles away. In the last three years, the volunteer staff have complained to the office manager numerous times about the administrative assistant's poor performance and unpleasant attitude, but the complaints were never addressed or documented in the administrative assistant's personnel file. Morale among the volunteers is low and client service quality has been declining steadily for months. Due to the distance between the offices, the supervisor has never directly observed the administrative assistant's job performance. However, at the volunteer office manager's suggestion, the supervisor recently placed the administrative assistant on a corrective action plan to address a lack of computer skills.

According to the office manager, the administrative assistant frequently violates the time-keeping policy by taking extended lunch breaks to volunteer at a local homeless shelter. Which action should the HR manager take?

Answers

- ( ) Send an email to all office staff members identifying the expectations for lunch break duration.
- ( ) Tell the administrative assistant that extended lunch breaks are not allowed.
- ( ) Instruct the administrative assistant's supervisor to implement disciplinary actions.
- (●) Meet with the office manager and supervisor to review the organization's time-keeping policies.

Question 30 of 134
Item shrm5730-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

The HR manager of a medical rehabilitation facility suspects that a director and assistant director are involved in a romantic relationship. One day, neither comes to work, and a rumor begins spreading within the organization that the director was arrested the previous night. A few days later, the HR manager learns that the director and assistant were indeed in a romantic relationship that recently ended, and that the director has been accused of threatening behavior against the assistant director. The assistant director files a restraining order against the director and plans to return to work. Because of the charges and the restraining order, the director is placed on unpaid suspension until the court trial, which is scheduled to take place in a month. The CEO places the HR manager in charge of handling the situation.

In the weeks after the arrest, a division surfaces among employees. Although employees are not discussing the situation at work, some show support for the director while others support the assistant director, leading to strained relationships and less communication and collaboration. How should the HR manager address this?

Answers

- (●) Conduct an all-employee meeting that allows employees to voice their concerns about the situation.
- ( ) Request that all managers discuss the importance of collaboration and communication in employee meetings.
- ( ) Contract with a psychological counselor to meet any employees with concerns.
- ( ) Conduct team-building activities throughout the company to encourage communication and collaboration.

Question 31 of 134
Item shrm5730-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

The HR manager of a medical rehabilitation facility suspects that a director and assistant director are involved in a romantic relationship. One day, neither comes to work, and a rumor begins spreading within the organization that the director was arrested the previous night. A few days later, the HR manager learns that the director and assistant were indeed in a romantic relationship that recently ended, and that the director has been accused of threatening behavior against the assistant director. The assistant director files a restraining order against the director and plans to return to work. Because of the charges and the restraining order, the director is placed on unpaid suspension until the court trial, which is scheduled to take place in a month. The CEO places the HR manager in charge of handling the situation.

Although all employees are informed of the general situation, the HR manager and other HR employees know more details. The HR manager is concerned about these details being shared with other employees, either purposely or inadvertently, by the other HR employees. What should the HR manager do?

Answers

- ○ Email all HR employees communicating that any breach of confidentiality will result in disciplinary action.
- ○ Email the HR staff expressing confidence that they will maintain confidentiality regarding the details of the situation.
- ◉ Meet one-on-one with each HR employee to explain why confidentiality is important.
- ○ Hold a brief team meeting at the beginning of each day to remind HR employees of the importance of confidentiality.

Question 32 of 134
Item shrm5733-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A local midsize organization was acquired by a multinational company. When the acquisition was announced, senior leaders stated that there would be minimal changes in day-to-day work, and that important organizational policies, such as salary decisions and career development paths, would remain mostly the same. However, six months after the acquisition, the CEO of the multinational company notifies the HR department of a plan to lay off half of the IT employees who were employed by the acquired organization. The CEO cites poor organizational and cultural fit as reasons for wanting to terminate their employment, stating because they are not a cultural fit, morale is decreasing among the multinational company's staff members.

What should the HR manager recommend to the HR team to create a more cohesive company culture across the entire organization?

Answers

- ○ Encourage more after-hours happy hours for new employees.
- ○ Recommend that the organization create a new company intranet focused on enhancing communication.
- ○ Institute an annual conference for the whole organization to network internally.
- ◉ Invite employees from across the organization to participate in companywide projects.

Question 33 of 134
Item shrm5733-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A local midsize organization was acquired by a multinational company. When the acquisition was announced, senior leaders stated that there would be minimal changes in day-to-day work, and that important organizational policies, such as salary decisions and career development paths, would remain mostly the same. However, six months after the acquisition, the CEO of the multinational company notifies the HR department of a plan to lay off half of the IT employees who were employed by the acquired organization. The CEO cites poor organizational and cultural fit as reasons for wanting to terminate their employment, stating because they are not a cultural fit, morale is decreasing among the multinational company's staff members.

The CEO suggests to the HR manager that the company restrict its hiring to persons with similar backgrounds and experiences to improve cultural fit among employees. How should the HR manager respond to this suggestion?

Answers

- ○ Explain to the CEO how a diverse workforce can be beneficial to the company.
- ○ Recommend the CEO and other senior leaders attend a diversity training seminar.
- ◉ Inform the CEO of the legal risks associated with the proposed policy.
- ○ Explain to the CEO how such a practice could negatively impact the company's brand.

Question 34 of 134
Item shrm5744

Union workers file a grievance that the contract provisions have been violated. What third party is authorized to dictate an agreement to settle the matter?

Answers

- ○ Mediator
- ○ Conciliator
- ○ Counselor
- ◉ Arbitrator

Question 35 of 134
Item shrm5676-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A cooperatively owned retail company endorses a culture that values independence and individuality. The company's president frequently expresses pride in the fact that there are no written companywide policies and that department heads have the autonomy to make their own decisions. However, over time, each department has established different personnel management practices and department heads do not communicate with each other. In addition, employee morale and customer service quality have been declining for several years while turnover has increased. The company hires a new general manager to oversee the department heads and address these issues. The general manager recognizes the need to change the way the company operates but is afraid to make adjustments that impact the culture and limit the department heads' independence. The general manager hires an HR manager to set up an HR function and help resolve the challenges. As soon as the department heads learn of the hire, they send complaints to the general manager stating that external applicants should not be hired for management positions because they will try to change the company culture.

The HR manager learns that the department heads ignore the general manager's requests to discuss employee morale and they use bullying to get the general manager to concede to their demands. Which action should the HR manager take?

Answers

- ○ Ask the company's president to make a formal statement about bullying.
- ○ Offer to help the general manager compose effective emails to the department heads.
- ◉ Explain to the department heads why employee morale must be addressed.
- ○ Notify the department heads that bullying will no longer be tolerated.

Question 36 of 134
Item shrm5676-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A cooperatively owned retail company endorses a culture that values independence and individuality. The company's president frequently expresses pride in the fact that there are no written companywide policies and that department heads have the autonomy to make their own decisions. However, over time, each department has established different personnel management practices and department heads do not communicate with each other. In addition, employee morale and customer service quality have been declining for several years while turnover has increased. The company hires a new general manager to oversee the department heads and address these issues. The general manager recognizes the need to change the way the company operates but is afraid to make adjustments that impact the culture and limit the department heads' independence. The general manager hires an HR manager to set up an HR function and help resolve the challenges. As soon as the department heads learn of the hire, they send complaints to the general manager stating that external applicants should not be hired for management positions because they will try to change the company culture.

The HR manager learns that salary administration for employees is not consistent across departments. Which is the first action the HR manager should take?

Answers

- ◉ Meet with each department head individually to discuss how they design and implement pay policies.
- ○ Ask the department heads to review and update position descriptions to ensure they accurately reflect current job duties.
- ○ Explain to the company's president how the unfair pay policies are related to high turnover and low morale.
- ○ Schedule a meeting with the department heads to draft a new companywide pay policy.

Question 37 of 134
Item shrm5681-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A large company is downsizing its workforce to decrease operating expenses. The CEO and the CFO want the HR director to expedite the process in preparation for the new fiscal year. The HR director is concerned about time constraints since the new fiscal year is two months away. Since new leadership started implementing changes to organizational structure and business operations, employees have lost trust in the company's leadership. The HR director is also concerned the layoffs will further impact employee morale and perceptions of fairness, potentially shifting company culture. Employee absenteeism has been on the rise over the past three months. The frontline managers express concerns about being unable to meet customer deadlines due to departments being short-staffed. The HR director must develop a plan to provide all employees with accurate information about the company's plan to downsize, implement strategies that align with the company's goals, and provide resources to assist employees throughout the transition. At the same time, the HR director wants to present a new timeline to the CEO that will better support the business and the employees.

The HR director is concerned that misinformation relating to the company's plan to downsize is being communicated to employees. Which action should the HR director take to communicate the downsizing policy to employees effectively?

Answers

- ◉ Inform managers about the downsizing policy to support the accuracy of information communicated to employees.
- ○ Post the downsizing policy in locations easily accessible to all employees.
- ○ Create a virtual question box where employees can ask questions about the downsizing policy.
- ○ Deliver the downsizing policy and workforce reduction plan consistently across the company.

Question 38 of 134
Item shrm5681-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A large company is downsizing its workforce to decrease operating expenses. The CEO and the CFO want the HR director to expedite the process in preparation for the new fiscal year. The HR director is concerned about time constraints since the new fiscal year is two months away. Since new leadership started implementing changes to organizational structure and business operations, employees have lost trust in the company's leadership. The HR director is also concerned the layoffs will further impact employee morale and perceptions of fairness, potentially shifting company culture. Employee absenteeism has been on the rise over the past three months. The frontline managers express concerns about being unable to meet customer deadlines due to departments being short-staffed. The HR director must develop a plan to provide all employees with accurate information about the company's plan to downsize, implement strategies that align with the company's goals, and provide resources to assist employees throughout the transition. At the same time, the HR director wants to present a new timeline to the CEO that will better support the business and the employees.

The HR director anticipates workplace survivor syndrome may affect the remaining workforce. Many employees are apprehensive about the company addressing employees' welfare and job security. How should the HR director instruct the HR team to assist the remaining workforce throughout the transition?

Answers

- ○ Advise employees that counseling and employee assistance are available.
- ◉ Create a hotline where employees can anonymously call or message in with their concerns.
- ○ Post flyers noting the organization's dedication to its employees.
- ○ Send a companywide email that addresses the future of the company.

Question 39 of 134
Item shrm5681-3

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A large company is downsizing its workforce to decrease operating expenses. The CEO and the CFO want the HR director to expedite the process in preparation for the new fiscal year. The HR director is concerned about time constraints since the new fiscal year is two months away. Since new leadership started implementing changes to organizational structure and business operations, employees have lost trust in the company's leadership. The HR director is also concerned the layoffs will further impact employee morale and perceptions of fairness, potentially shifting company culture. Employee absenteeism has been on the rise over the past three months. The frontline managers express concerns about being unable to meet customer deadlines due to departments being short-staffed. The HR director must develop a plan to provide all employees with accurate information about the company's plan to downsize, implement strategies that align with the company's goals, and provide resources to assist employees throughout the transition. At the same time, the HR director wants to present a new timeline to the CEO that will better support the business and the employees.

The HR director must determine which employees should be laid off while considering fairness and consistency. Which action should the HR director take when selecting these employees?

Answers

- ○ Concentrate layoffs in departments least aligned with company strategy.
- ○ Lay off employees with the least amount of tenure with the company.
- ◉ Ask managers to identify employees with low performance.
- ○ Choose employees with low performance based on job-related criteria.

Question 40 of 134
Item shrm5682-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A company's call center supervisor suspects an agent is in possession of a controlled substance while at work. The supervisor also suspects that the agent is currently under the influence of this controlled substance. The company's substance use policy prohibits employees from using controlled substances while performing duties during designated work hours. The company requires employees to read and acknowledge the policy upon hire and during annual training. The supervisor confronts the agent, but the agent denies having a controlled substance. The supervisor reports the incident to the HR manager. The company's substance use policy prohibits employees from using controlled substances; however, after further review of the policy, it does not explicitly state bringing controlled substances into the workplace is unauthorized. The HR manager decides to investigate the incident.

After the investigation is complete, which action should the HR manager take to communicate the outcome of the investigation to the supervisor?

Answers

- ○ Schedule a phone call with the supervisor to explain how the supervisor's observations were used in the investigation.
- ○ Send an email to the supervisor with a summary of the results of the investigation.
- ◉ Meet with the supervisor to explain the outcome and the rationale for the decision.
- ○ Write a detailed report that includes the results of the investigation to send to the supervisor.

Question 41 of 134
Item shrm5682-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A company's call center supervisor suspects an agent is in possession of a controlled substance while at work. The supervisor also suspects that the agent is currently under the influence of this controlled substance. The company's substance use policy prohibits employees from using controlled substances while performing duties during designated work hours. The company requires employees to read and acknowledge the policy upon hire and during annual training. The supervisor confronts the agent, but the agent denies having a controlled substance. The supervisor reports the incident to the HR manager. The company's substance use policy prohibits employees from using controlled substances; however, after further review of the policy, it does not explicitly state bringing controlled substances into the workplace is unauthorized. The HR manager decides to investigate the incident.

The agent meets with the HR manager and admits to having a controlled substance in the workplace. However, the agent denies being under the influence of the controlled substance. How should the HR manager proceed after acquiring this information?

Answers

- ○ Ask the agent for consent to conduct a search of the agent's belongings and cubicle.
- ◉ Inform the agent that HR will be interviewing co-workers who may have witnessed the incident.
- ○ Advise the agent that if the agent is not truthful, then there may be serious consequences.
- ○ Explain to the agent that the supervisor claims to have observed the agent under the influence of the substance.

Question 42 of 134
Item shrm5705

Which approach should be used during the performance appraisal process?

Answers

- ○ Meet annually with employees to discuss their performance growth.
- ◉ Listen openly and empathetically to each other's views and concerns.
- ○ Defend behaviors and opinions when receiving criticism during the review meeting.
- ○ Set future expectations for the employees based on the negative points discussed.

Question 43 of 134
Item shrm5723-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

The HR manager of a global company is tasked with implementing the company's first-ever learning management system. The company's chief human resource officer (CHRO) requires a tight deadline to launch the new learning management system. The HR manager is concerned that the deadline does not allow the company sufficient time to train and educate HR teams before the learning management system is available to all employees. The HR manager wants to gather feedback from the HR teams and present them to the CHRO before moving forward. However, the CHRO has already chosen a learning management system software. The CHRO tasks the HR manager with implementing steps to resolve language and cultural barriers when the company begins its transition to the new learning management system. One regional HR team has concerns about the new system, suggesting that the learning management system is not user-friendly or the best available option. The HR manager expresses concerns about the ability to support regional HR teams without first conducting a series of trainings. The HR manager also expresses concerns about the lack of on-time support to resolve possible issues.

How should the HR manager address the concerns expressed by the regional HR team?

Answers

- ○ Offer additional training for the regional HR team to improve proficiency with the learning management system.
- ◉ Meet with the regional HR team to understand their specific concerns.
- ○ Suggest that the regional HR team become the pilot group for future learning management system upgrades.
- ○ Request the regional HR team suggest an alternate learning management system.

Question 44 of 134
Item shrm5723-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

The HR manager of a global company is tasked with implementing the company's first-ever learning management system. The company's chief human resource officer (CHRO) requires a tight deadline to launch the new learning management system. The HR manager is concerned that the deadline does not allow the company sufficient time to train and educate HR teams before the learning management system is available to all employees. The HR manager wants to gather feedback from the HR teams and present them to the CHRO before moving forward. However, the CHRO has already chosen a learning management system software. The CHRO tasks the HR manager with implementing steps to resolve language and cultural barriers when the company begins its transition to the new learning management system. One regional HR team has concerns about the new system, suggesting that the learning management system is not user-friendly or the best available option. The HR manager expresses concerns about the ability to support regional HR teams without first conducting a series of trainings. The HR manager also expresses concerns about the lack of on-time support to resolve possible issues.

Which action should the HR manager take when implementing the learning management system to ensure the learning platform supports all learners?

Answers

- ○ Translate all learning management system content into multiple languages.
- ◉ Include accessibility features such as read-aloud functions for all learning management system content.
- ○ Recommend all employees have access to the same learning management system content.
- ○ Research whether all features of the learning management system are available to employees across the company.

Question 45 of 134
Item shrm5732-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

From conversations with employees across different workgroups, the HR team at a sales company has become aware that low morale may be the cause of a recent decline in organizational productivity. The HR manager would like to administer an online engagement survey to all employees in the company. Historically, senior leaders have resisted companywide feedback initiatives and have reacted poorly to negative feedback about their leadership practices. Despite their resistance in the past, the senior leaders have agreed to let the HR manager administer an engagement survey. Although many employees seem enthusiastic about the opportunity to provide feedback, several employees are skeptical of the survey's impact and how the feedback will be used.

What should the HR manager do to ensure that employees spend sufficient time thoughtfully completing the survey?

Answers

- ○ Emphasize that high participation is needed for survey results to be meaningful.
- ○ Send a companywide email with the link to the survey and detailed instructions.
- ○ Express that senior management has requested employee participation.
- ◉ Explain how survey results will translate into action items for the company.

Question 46 of 134
Item shrm5732-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

From conversations with employees across different workgroups, the HR team at a sales company has become aware that low morale may be the cause of a recent decline in organizational productivity. The HR manager would like to administer an online engagement survey to all employees in the company. Historically, senior leaders have resisted companywide feedback initiatives and have reacted poorly to negative feedback about their leadership practices. Despite their resistance in the past, the senior leaders have agreed to let the HR manager administer an engagement survey. Although many employees seem enthusiastic about the opportunity to provide feedback, several employees are skeptical of the survey's impact and how the feedback will be used.

When creating the survey, what should the HR manager do to ensure that the survey will produce high-quality data from which to make meaningful conclusions?

Answers

- ○ Create new scales to measure variables unique to the company.
- ◉ Ensure that survey questions are based on reliable and valid measures.
- ○ Include many variables in order to obtain maximum information.
- ○ Use a numerical scale for the majority of questions to retrieve quantitative data.

Question 47 of 134
Item shrm5732-3

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

From conversations with employees across different workgroups, the HR team at a sales company has become aware that low morale may be the cause of a recent decline in organizational productivity. The HR manager would like to administer an online engagement survey to all employees in the company. Historically, senior leaders have resisted companywide feedback initiatives and have reacted poorly to negative feedback about their leadership practices. Despite their resistance in the past, the senior leaders have agreed to let the HR manager administer an engagement survey. Although many employees seem enthusiastic about the opportunity to provide feedback, several employees are skeptical of the survey's impact and how the feedback will be used.

After administering the survey, open-ended feedback from a small number of survey participants indicates that senior leaders hold biased views of employees who are members of employee sub-groups. Which action should the HR manager take to address this finding?

Answers

- ○ Remind all employees of the company's existing resources, such as the employee assistance program.
- ◉ Present a summary of the main findings to senior leaders.
- ○ Compile all the survey feedback into one file and send to senior leaders.
- ○ Design a mandatory training session for all employees to promote inclusion in the workplace.

Question 48 of 134
Item shrm5672-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A team manager at a large consulting firm expresses concerns to the team director and HR manager that turnover among junior-level staff is high. The loss of junior-level staff is impacting the ability of senior staff to efficiently and effectively meet client needs. As a result, senior staff are hesitant to take on new projects, in turn impacting the firm's overall revenue. The team director asks the senior staff their opinions as to why turnover among junior-level staff is so high. Senior staff agree the primary reason is that junior-level staff are underpaid. To mitigate this issue, the team director suggests to the HR manager that junior-level staff be paid retention bonuses after their first, second, and third years of employment. The team director asks the HR manager's opinion as to whether this is likely to be an effective solution and how a new bonus system would influence overall organizational functioning.

The HR manager determines that implementing retention bonuses is likely to decrease junior-level staff turnover. Which should the HR manager do to determine the potential effects of a new bonus system on overall organizational functioning?

Answers

- ○ Ask senior leaders their opinion on the potential risks of implementing a new bonus system.
- ○ Calculate the long-term, yearly cost of providing bonuses to junior-level staff.
- ◉ Calculate the return on investment associated with the new bonus system.
- ○ Calculate the cost of turnover due to frequent recruiting, training, and onboarding.

Question 49 of 134
Item shrm5672-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A team manager at a large consulting firm expresses concerns to the team director and HR manager that turnover among junior-level staff is high. The loss of junior-level staff is impacting the ability of senior staff to efficiently and effectively meet client needs. As a result, senior staff are hesitant to take on new projects, in turn impacting the firm's overall revenue. The team director asks the senior staff their opinions as to why turnover among junior-level staff is so high. Senior staff agree the primary reason is that junior-level staff are underpaid. To mitigate this issue, the team director suggests to the HR manager that junior-level staff be paid retention bonuses after their first, second, and third years of employment. The team director asks the HR manager's opinion as to whether this is likely to be an effective solution and how a new bonus system would influence overall organizational functioning.

A review of engagement surveys indicates junior-level staff report low levels of satisfaction with work/life balance. How should the HR manager use this data?

Answers

- ○ Communicate the engagement survey data to the entire firm via email and request suggestions.
- ◉ Conduct one-on-one meetings with junior-level staff to learn the causes of poor work/life balance.
- ○ Implement workshops focused on work/life balance to see if levels of satisfaction increase.
- ○ Share the engagement survey data with the team director and brainstorm possible action plans.

Question 50 of 134
Item shrm5697

Which best describes how strategic human resource management helps an organization maintain a competitive advantage?

Answers

- (●) It focuses on how the organization's goals will be achieved through HR by means of integrated HR strategies, policies, and practices.
- ( ) It focuses HR strategies, policies, and practices on internal and external environments in which the organization competes.
- ( ) It focuses on creating, implementing, and maintaining organizational goals based on HR strategies, policies, and practices.
- ( ) It focuses on efficiency and controlling costs within boundaries set by the organization as well as HR strategies, policies, and practices.

Question 51 of 134
Item shrm5726-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A small commercial marketing firm has been growing its business steadily for three years. Revenue has doubled each year and demand is high. Employees work extended weekday hours and regularly work on weekends to ensure products are delivered on time and with the highest quality. Some employees have canceled vacation plans at the last minute to meet deadlines. The firm's president wants the company to be known as the best workplace in the industry and hires an HR professional to establish the firm's HR department. During the HR professional's second week, the firm's senior designer sends an email to the HR professional and the president demanding higher compensation or else threatening to resign. The senior designer is a key contributor to the firm's success and viewed as a role model by the other designers who seek the senior designer's advice and insight.

Customer feedback is extremely positive and customers have begun to expect the high quality and short deadlines that the firm has been able to achieve. What should the HR professional do to align the performance management system with key business goals?

Answers

- ( ) Design a mentoring program that provides opportunities for senior designers to mentor less experienced designers.
- ( ) Create an annual service award program that recognizes employees who make personal sacrifices to meet deadlines.
- (●) Survey the designers to identify which types of benefits will motivate them to maintain their high-quality work.
- ( ) Recognize the top-performing employee publicly each month based on customer feedback.

Question 52 of 134
Item shrm5726-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A small commercial marketing firm has been growing its business steadily for three years. Revenue has doubled each year and demand is high. Employees work extended weekday hours and regularly work on weekends to ensure products are delivered on time and with the highest quality. Some employees have canceled vacation plans at the last minute to meet deadlines. The firm's president wants the company to be known as the best workplace in the industry and hires an HR professional to establish the firm's HR department. During the HR professional's second week, the firm's senior designer sends an email to the HR professional and the president demanding higher compensation or else threatening to resign. The senior designer is a key contributor to the firm's success and viewed as a role model by the other designers who seek the senior designer's advice and insight.

The president believes the senior designer is attempting to force the firm to approve the increase in compensation and instructs the HR professional to deny the designer's request. What should the HR professional do?

Answers

- (●) Advise the president to meet with the senior designer to discuss the designer's request.
- ( ) Advise the president to offer the senior designer a one-time monetary bonus.
- ( ) Accept the senior designer's resignation and post the job opening announcement.
- ( ) Ask the senior designer to identify the desired amount of compensation.

Question 53 of 134
Item shrm5729-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A small construction company routinely conducts substance use tests of its employees to check for substances that violate company policy. An independent contractor conducts the substance use tests for the company. In the past, the company has had issues with many of its employees using banned substances during work hours. This led to several safety violations and concerns about employee productivity. The company's reputation was negatively affected, resulting in a loss of contract work. Since the company began random, frequent substance use testing a year ago, these incidents have become less common and the company's reputation has improved. The company now tests each employee at least once per month. The cost of testing significantly limits the company's profitability, but leadership has determined it is worth it. The company has a policy to place any worker who fails a substance use test into the company's employee assistance program (EAP) where the employee must undergo counseling. Many frontline employees remain skeptical of the substance use testing process and believe it takes up too much time, but most supervisors at the company are in favor of it.

One employee's substance use test results are inconclusive. The contractor tells the HR manager the employee likely used a banned substance and tampered with the substance use test sample. Additional testing may get a conclusive result but would cost extra. Which should the HR manager do?

Answers

- ○ Pay for the employee to undergo an additional substance use test with the contractor.
- ◉ Ask the contractor to adopt procedures to avoid employee sample tampering.
- ○ Ask the employee if the sample was tampered with.
- ○ Warn the employee that any future inconclusive tests will be treated as a test failure.

Question 54 of 134
Item shrm5729-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 2 questions.

A small construction company routinely conducts substance use tests of its employees to check for substances that violate company policy. An independent contractor conducts the substance use tests for the company. In the past, the company has had issues with many of its employees using banned substances during work hours. This led to several safety violations and concerns about employee productivity. The company's reputation was negatively affected, resulting in a loss of contract work. Since the company began random, frequent substance use testing a year ago, these incidents have become less common and the company's reputation has improved. The company now tests each employee at least once per month. The cost of testing significantly limits the company's profitability, but leadership has determined it is worth it. The company has a policy to place any worker who fails a substance use test into the company's employee assistance program (EAP) where the employee must undergo counseling. Many frontline employees remain skeptical of the substance use testing process and believe it takes up too much time, but most supervisors at the company are in favor of it.

The EAP has gained a negative reputation among frontline employees as a waste of time. The HR manager believes that employees do not see the value of the program. Which should the HR manager do to improve frontline employees' acceptance of the EAP?

Answers

- ○ Research benchmarks of successful EAPs to adopt process improvements.
- ◉ Conduct focus groups to discuss ways to improve the EAP.
- ○ Invite a representative of the EAP to talk to employees about its benefits.
- ○ Ask an employee who has used the EAP to advocate for it.

Question 55 of 134
Item shrm5710

What is the first step in the performance appraisal process?

Answers

- ○ Measure employee performance.
- ◉ Establish a competency model.
- ○ Identify work to be evaluated.
- ○ Identify performance dimensions.

Question 56 of 134
Item shrm5725-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

An HR manager at a large biotech research facility has a reputation of being kind and friendly but lacking communication skills, follow-through, and attention to detail. The HR manager's work frequently contains errors and must be redone. As a result, HR staff prefer to work extra hours to complete their assignments rather than accept assistance from the HR manager. Additionally, the HR manager often interrupts other HR staff during the workday to socialize. Recent budget and staffing cuts have severely limited the HR department's ability to carry out core functions. An HR generalist who reports to the HR manager decides to deal with the problem on behalf of the other staff members and submits a complaint to the HR VP describing the problem and requesting immediate corrective action. After six months, the HR generalist has not observed any actions taken or any change in the HR manager's behavior. The HR generalist suspects that corrective action has not been taken because the HR manager is a close friend of the company's CEO.

After emailing the HR manager three times with no reply, a department director emails the HR generalist inquiring about a report the HR manager promised to deliver in one week. How should the HR generalist respond to the director's email?

Answers

- ○ Ask the director to suggest a new due date for receiving the report.
- ○ Notify the director that the HR department is severely understaffed and may not be able to fulfill the request.
- ○ Notify the director that the HR manager frequently makes promises that cannot be fulfilled.
- ◉ Notify the director that an HR staff member will personally convey the director's message to the HR manager.

Question 57 of 134
Item shrm5725-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

An HR manager at a large biotech research facility has a reputation of being kind and friendly but lacking communication skills, follow-through, and attention to detail. The HR manager's work frequently contains errors and must be redone. As a result, HR staff prefer to work extra hours to complete their assignments rather than accept assistance from the HR manager. Additionally, the HR manager often interrupts other HR staff during the workday to socialize. Recent budget and staffing cuts have severely limited the HR department's ability to carry out core functions. An HR generalist who reports to the HR manager decides to deal with the problem on behalf of the other staff members and submits a complaint to the HR VP describing the problem and requesting immediate corrective action. After six months, the HR generalist has not observed any actions taken or any change in the HR manager's behavior. The HR generalist suspects that corrective action has not been taken because the HR manager is a close friend of the company's CEO.

HR staff are becoming increasingly frustrated with the HR manager's poor performance and beginning to disengage from their work. What course of action should the HR generalist take to halt the decline in engagement?

Answers

- ◉ Present data to the HR VP on how the HR manager's ineffectiveness has affected staff engagement.
- ○ Encourage other HR staff members to be patient with the slow process of change.
- ○ Ask the HR manager to organize a team-building exercise for the HR staff.
- ○ Ask the other HR staff members if they are willing to sign a grievance letter and submit it to senior leadership.

Question 58 of 134
Item shrm5725-3

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

An HR manager at a large biotech research facility has a reputation of being kind and friendly but lacking communication skills, follow-through, and attention to detail. The HR manager's work frequently contains errors and must be redone. As a result, HR staff prefer to work extra hours to complete their assignments rather than accept assistance from the HR manager. Additionally, the HR manager often interrupts other HR staff during the workday to socialize. Recent budget and staffing cuts have severely limited the HR department's ability to carry out core functions. An HR generalist who reports to the HR manager decides to deal with the problem on behalf of the other staff members and submits a complaint to the HR VP describing the problem and requesting immediate corrective action. After six months, the HR generalist has not observed any actions taken or any change in the HR manager's behavior. The HR generalist suspects that corrective action has not been taken because the HR manager is a close friend of the company's CEO.

The HR VP contacts the HR generalist asking for recommendations on how to improve the HR manager's performance. Which action should the HR generalist recommend the HR VP take first?

Answers

- ○ Ask the HR manager to provide written documentation of strengths and weaknesses for the previous 12 months of performance.
- ○ Send the HR manager to training focused on productivity and communication skills.
- ◉ Meet with the HR manager to review specific examples of poor performance exhibited by the manager.
- ○ Replace the HR manager with the most senior HR generalist.

Question 59 of 134
Item shrm5656

Which is an important consideration when relying on big data?

Answers

- ○ There are often too many sources of data to gather to make effective decisions.
- ○ Big data are typically not reliable or valid for supporting business cases.
- ◉ Big data must be linked to the competitive strategy of the business.
- ○ Real-time information makes it difficult for an organization to be more agile than competitors.

Question 60 of 134
Item shrm5674-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A midsize company has recently hired a new HR manager. The HR department is small with only three HR professionals including the HR manager. Senior leadership notices that the employees across departments, and sometimes within departments, seem to work in silos and do not interact with each other. Leadership asks the HR manager to bring some energy into the organization and build a more collaborative and engaged environment.

What is the first step the HR manager should take in fostering a more collaborative environment?

Answers

- ○ Establish a social events committee that includes members from a variety of departments.
- ○ Implement a rewards and recognition program for teams that collaborate the most.
- ◉ Review current practices to learn what the company is already doing regarding collaboration.
- ○ Arrange for periodic companywide presentations in which departments present their ongoing projects.

Question 61 of 134
Item shrm5674-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A midsize company has recently hired a new HR manager. The HR department is small with only three HR professionals including the HR manager. Senior leadership notices that the employees across departments, and sometimes within departments, seem to work in silos and do not interact with each other. Leadership asks the HR manager to bring some energy into the organization and build a more collaborative and engaged environment.

While the HR manager is developing the engagement plan, an HR associate is hired and starts suggesting changes to the plan. How should the HR manager react to the HR associate's suggested changes?

Answers

- ○ Suggest the new HR associate take the lead on finalizing and implementing the engagement plan.
- ◉ Invite the new HR associate to review and provide one round of feedback in order to launch the program on time and proceed with the scheduled timeline.
- ○ Include the HR associate's ideas in the next company survey to gauge interest but proceed with the current plan for now.
- ○ Review the HR associate's resume to verify expertise related to employee engagement.

Question 62 of 134
Item shrm5674-3

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

A midsize company has recently hired a new HR manager. The HR department is small with only three HR professionals including the HR manager. Senior leadership notices that the employees across departments, and sometimes within departments, seem to work in silos and do not interact with each other. Leadership asks the HR manager to bring some energy into the organization and build a more collaborative and engaged environment.

What is the best way to get all teams in the organization involved in HR-sponsored engagement activities?

Answers

- ○ Research appealing and effective engagement activities based on organizational demographics.
- ◉ Solicit feedback from each team about their ideas regarding engagement activities.
- ○ Encourage employees to take the opportunity to visit with other teams.
- ○ Offer an incentive for each employee who participates in the engagement activity.

Question 63 of 134
Item shrm5727-1

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

Two employees work for the same company; one has been with the company for five years, and the other for two years. The more experienced employee was assigned to mentor the new employee. Even though the mentee has previously performed well, recent performance issues have led to the mentee being placed on a performance improvement plan. The mentor believes the plan will not improve the mentee's performance and starts completing some of the mentee's tasks. Additionally, the mentor has begun verbally harassing the mentee. The mentee files a formal complaint against the mentor for poor training and repeated harassment.

Following the complaint, the HR manager meets with each employee to understand the issue. During these meetings, the HR manager learns that the mentor wants the mentee terminated due to poor performance, and the mentee wants the mentor terminated due to the mentor's unprofessionalism and lack of ability to provide proper training.

Which action should the HR manager take to investigate the mentee's claims about the mentor's poor training?

Answers

- ○ Check the mentor's records to see if there are any other instances of employee conflict.
- ◉ Arrange individual meetings with some of the mentor's previous mentees to gather their opinions.
- ○ Request that the mentee provide specific examples of ineffective training methods the mentor has used.
- ○ Compare the performance of the employees this mentor trained to employees trained by other mentors.

Question 64 of 134
Item shrm5727-2

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

Two employees work for the same company; one has been with the company for five years, and the other for two years. The more experienced employee was assigned to mentor the new employee. Even though the mentee has previously performed well, recent performance issues have led to the mentee being placed on a performance improvement plan. The mentor believes the plan will not improve the mentee's performance and starts completing some of the mentee's tasks. Additionally, the mentor has begun verbally harassing the mentee. The mentee files a formal complaint against the mentor for poor training and repeated harassment.

Following the complaint, the HR manager meets with each employee to understand the issue. During these meetings, the HR manager learns that the mentor wants the mentee terminated due to poor performance, and the mentee wants the mentor terminated due to the mentor's unprofessionalism and lack of ability to provide proper training.

The HR manager discovers that the mentor has harassed other employees as well. Which action should the HR manager take to prevent the mentor from harassing other employees in the future?

Answers

- ◉ Meet with the mentor to explain why offensive conduct like harassment is unacceptable behavior.
- ○ Emphasize that the next complaint will result in the mentor's termination from the company.
- ○ Inform the mentor that their behavior may cause the mentor's reputation in the company to be ruined.
- ○ Inform the mentor of their assignment to a performance improvement plan.

Question 65 of 134
Item shrm5727-3

Refer to the following scenario for the next 3 questions.

Two employees work for the same company; one has been with the company for five years, and the other for two years. The more experienced employee was assigned to mentor the new employee. Even though the mentee has previously performed well, recent performance issues have led to the mentee being placed on a performance improvement plan. The mentor believes the plan will not improve the mentee's performance and starts completing some of the mentee's tasks. Additionally, the mentor has begun verbally harassing the mentee. The mentee files a formal complaint against the mentor for poor training and repeated harassment.

Following the complaint, the HR manager meets with each employee to understand the issue. During these meetings, the HR manager learns that the mentor wants the mentee terminated due to poor performance, and the mentee wants the mentor terminated due to the mentor's unprofessionalism and lack of ability to provide proper training.

The mentee and mentor are each still calling for the other to be terminated. Which action should the HR manager take to achieve the best outcome for the business?

Answers

- ○ Assign the mentor to oversee a different mentee to minimize communication between the employees.
- ◉ Schedule weekly check-in meetings for the mentor and mentee to communicate their issues.
- ○ Require the mentor and mentee to attend conflict resolution training to learn about effective ways to communicate with each other.
- ○ Request both employees to go on leave to calm themselves down before communicating with each other.

Question 66 of 134
Item shrm5735

Which is the most effective way to tie employee engagement survey responses to the mission and goals of the company?

Answers

- ○ Form a subcommittee to create and implement an action plan.
- ○ Communicate findings from the survey to all employees.
- ○ Analyze data to benchmark against the prior year's results.
- ◉ Share survey results with leadership and collect their input.

Question 67 of 134
Item shrm5739

An HR director administers an employee survey measuring job satisfaction and perceptions of training and development opportunities. The director then presents the survey results to the executive leadership team. Which type of information has the director presented to the team?

Answers

- ○ Numerical inferences
- ◉ Descriptive statistics
- ○ Workforce analysis
- ○ Big data

Question 68 of 134
Item shrm5666

A company executive tasked an IT professional with purchasing technology tools for the company's employees. Within days of using the tools, the employees became frustrated and refused to use them. Why should the executive have included HR in the purchase decision?

Answers

- ○ HR professionals have technical knowledge of the technology tools which will reduce employee frustration.
- ◉ HR professionals know the business environment and understand the employees within the organization.
- ○ HR professionals can provide training on the technology tools they are familiar with.
- ○ HR professionals know what technology tools the company needs.

Question 69 of 134
Item shrm5695

An organization reviews its strategic plan once a year. Which best describes the goal of reviewing the plan this often?

Answers

- ○ To remedy its weaknesses
- ◉ To decrease the chance of strategic drift
- ○ To reinforce its strength
- ○ To use environmental opportunities

Question 70 of 134
Item shrm5714

The VP of finance is consulting with HR about an upcoming large-scale project. Which method should HR recommend to track the project tasks and progress?

Answers

- ○ Variance analysis
- ○ Critical path analysis
- ◉ Gantt chart
- ○ Outcome monitoring

Question 70 of 134
Item shrm5714

The VP of finance is consulting with HR about an upcoming large-scale project. Which method should HR recommend to track the project tasks and progress?

Answers

- ○ Variance analysis
- ○ Critical path analysis
- ◉ Gantt chart
- ○ Outcome monitoring

Question 71 of 134
Item shrm5717

In the traditional approach to strategic control, what follows the implementation of the strategies?

Answers

- ○ Goals are ranked by level of importance.
- ○ Stakeholders receive a progress report.
- ○ Strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats analysis is performed.
- ◉ Performance is measured against goals.

Question 72 of 134
Item shrm5722

Which theory states that an organization will be more successful when its numerous departments work together in harmony?

Answers

- ○ Contingency theory
- ○ Interdependence theory
- ◉ Systems theory
- ○ Human relations theory

Question 73 of 134
Item shrm5741

Which approach would effectively improve a talent acquisition process when using the Lean Six Sigma methodology?

Answers

- ○ Increasing the number of interviews in the recruitment process
- ○ Scheduling meetings for hiring managers to discuss each candidate's qualifications
- ○ Creating a template for hiring managers to identify qualified candidates
- ◉ Decreasing the amount of communication with qualified candidates

Question 74 of 134
Item shrm5746

A company gathers qualitative external information through a political, economic, social, technological, legal, and environmental (PESTLE) analysis in a territory where its business is expanding. The HR team's resulting workforce plan includes a recommendation to recruit executives locally for the new facility. What was most likely revealed in the PESTLE analysis to support this recommendation?

Answers

- ◉ Leaders from within the local territory will assimilate best with and be accepted by employees at the new facility.
- ○ The company should tap into its succession plan to diversify its labor pool and increase the quality of candidates for leadership roles.
- ○ Current executive team members lack knowledge of business customs required to succeed at the new facility.
- ○ The company is not financially secure enough to expand to a new territory.

Question 75 of 134
Item shrm5689

What is the first step in the development of a selection program?

Answers

- ○ Conducting an internal job posting to see whether there are suitable candidates within the organization
- ◉ Undertaking a job analysis to capture the activities, results, and environment that characterize the job
- ○ Undertaking competency modeling to identify the differentiating competencies required for the job
- ○ Advertising a job opening to attract as many qualified applicants as possible

Question 76 of 134
Item shrm5715

Which is the first step an HR department should take when analyzing job descriptions?

Answers

- ○ Compare jobs to other similar organizations.
- ○ Make necessary changes based on employee data.
- ○ Have employees complete a job analysis questionnaire.
- ◉ Interview managers on their employee's job duties.

Question 77 of 134
Item shrm5716

A high percentage of employees promoted to leadership positions are underperforming in their new role. Which initial step should the HR director take to reduce the likelihood of the problem reoccurring in the future?

Answers

- ◉ Review methods the company uses to consider employees for promotions.
- ○ Analyze the minimum job requirements of each position.
- ○ Develop a training module based on experiences of high-performing managers.
- ○ Ask the promoted employees what they dislike about their new role.

Question 78 of 134
Item shrm5747

Which level is one of the Four Cs of successful onboarding?

Answers

- ○ Culture
- ○ Coaching
- ○ Consideration
- ◉ Communication

Question 79 of 134
Item shrm5665

Which best describes job enrichment?

Answers

- ◉ A practice of moving employees between different tasks to promote experience and variety
- ○ A system for analyzing, comparing, and ranking different jobs according to the demands of each job
- ○ A technique that gives employees authority, autonomy, and control over the way the job is accomplished
- ○ A process to identify and determine job duties and requirements for a given job

Question 80 of 134
Item shrm5687

Which is an example of an intrinsic motivator?

Answers

- ○ Vacation
- ◉ Stimulating work
- ○ Incentive pay
- ○ Job security

Question 81 of 134
Item shrm5701

A highly productive office employee exhausts all paid leave days while trying to balance work and family responsibilities. The employee's absences are affecting department productivity. The employee's supervisor contacts HR for guidance. What solution should the HR manager suggest?

Answers

- ○ Reduce the employee's work hours.
- ○ Partner employees to share the employee's workload.
- ◉ Offer the option to telework.
- ○ Review the attendance policy with the employee.

Question 82 of 134
Item shrm5742

Which is an advantage of using a 360-degree evaluation?

Answers

- ○ Makes pay and promotion decisions straightforward.
- ○ Decreases the administrative burden of traditional performance feedback systems.
- ◉ Expands the scope of performance feedback an employee receives.
- ○ Increases team cohesiveness by increasing communication.

Question 83 of 134
Item shrm5684

A company is experiencing declining sales. The CEO directed the HR manager and sales manager to hire five more salespeople with the right skills to increase sales. The HR manager recommends adding a personality test to the recruitment process. Which personality trait is most relevant to this job?

Answers

- ◉ Emotional stability
- ○ Extraversion
- ○ Openness
- ○ Agreeableness

Question 84 of 134
Item shrm5685

Which leadership development technique allows employees to gain new skills, knowledge, and competencies needed for higher-level positions?

Answers

- ○ Succession planning
- ○ Job rotation
- ○ Performance improvement plans
- ◉ Stretch assignments

Question 85 of 134
Item shrm5698

A manufacturing company recently completed a needs assessment that showed a large gap in employees' diversity and sensitivity skills. Which is the first step the HR specialist should take to design the inclusion and diversity training?

Answers

- ◉ Plan the training method and techniques.
- ○ Establish the objectives of the training.
- ○ Identify the audience for the training.
- ○ Decide whether to create the training in-house or use a vendor.

Question 86 of 134
Item shrm5736

Which feature typically characterizes successful workplace mentoring relationships?

Answers

- ◉ An employee talking to a manager about career opportunities
- ○ A senior employee helping and protecting a junior employee
- ○ Two senior employees working together to improve their performance
- ○ Two new employees cooperating to be effective on the job

Question 87 of 134
Item shrm5658

Which means of gathering external intelligence best mitigates the risk of losing top executives to competitors?

Answers

- ○ Strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats analysis
- ◉ Salary benchmarking
- ○ Economic factors
- ○ Stakeholder pattern

Question 88 of 134
Item shrm5706

Which feature of a retirement plan most effectively encourages employees to increase their contributions?

Answers

- ◉ Profit sharing
- ○ Discretionary bonus
- ○ Auto-enrollment
- ○ Auto-escalation

Question 89 of 134
Item shrm5718

What term best describes when a new junior employee is earning nearly the same salary as other, more senior, employees for the same or similar work?

Answers

- ◉ Salary compression
- ○ Salary stagnation
- ○ Salary deflation
- ○ Salary inversion

Question 90 of 134
Item shrm5719

To attract and retain top talent, an organization sets pay rates to align with industry competitors in the same geographic region. Which compensation strategy has the company implemented?

Answers

- ○ Broadbanding
- ○ Competency based
- ◉ Matching the market
- ○ Point factor

Question 91 of 134
Item shrm5720

An HR director has extended an offer for a CFO role, but the candidate is hesitant about changing companies. Which change to the compensation plan would decrease the financial risk to the candidate?

Answers

- ◉ Adding a severance provision to the employment contract
- ○ Providing a non-compete agreement to the package
- ○ Promising the new CFO a seat on the board of directors
- ○ Improving the package by adding a commission incentive

Question 92 of 134
Item shrm5668

Which is an advantage of the decentralized HR model?

Answers

- ○ Consistency
- ◉ Accessibility
- ○ Autonomy
- ○ Efficiency

Question 93 of 134
Item shrm5696

Which HR organizational structure allows the HR team to focus on strategic and value-adding work by reducing manual tasks and centralizing information?

Answers

- (●) Functional HR
- ( ) Shared services model
- ( ) Professional employer organization
- ( ) Centralized HR

Question 94 of 134
Item shrm5707

A small company has an urgent need for temporary employees at a new site for a period of four months. As the sole HR manager, which action best serves the company's need?

Answers

- (●) Contract with an employee leasing company.
- ( ) Offer overtime hours to existing employees.
- ( ) Post a job announcement to recruit new employees.
- ( ) Relocate a group of employees from other sites.

Question 95 of 134
Item shrm5743

Which HR functional activity is transformational?

Answers

- (●) Engaging in a succession planning process
- ( ) Reviewing employee turnover data
- ( ) Identifying new employee benefit offerings
- ( ) Ensuring compliance with employment laws

Question 96 of 134
Item shrm5748

In which way can an HR business partner contribute strategically to address the future business needs of an organization?

Answers

- ( ) Process employee applications, and organize the interview and hiring process.
- ( ) Implement an HR management system to reduce costs using technology.
- ( ) Collect new hire paperwork and maintain employee files in a legally compliant manner.
- (●) Host an employee recognition event for top performers within the organization.

Question 97 of 134
Item shrm5752

A company triples its staff due to a successful new product. The HR generalist of one functional group is unable to address the growing number of questions from new employees about their benefits and compensation while also focusing on recruiting and training. How should the HR generalist manage these growing demands most effectively?

Answers

- ( ) Increase the HR budget.
- ( ) Realign the HR functions to business strategy.
- (●) Use centers of excellence.
- ( ) Hire HR business partners.

Question 98 of 134
Item shrm5663

Which action depicts the use of work analysis for organizational development?

Answers

- ( ) Prepare company manuals and standard operating procedures.
- ( ) Construct performance-rating scales and cognitive test items.
- (●) Identify the prerequisite knowledge, skills, and attitudes of jobs.
- ( ) Develop job descriptions, standards, and performance evaluations.

Question 99 of 134
Item shrm5686

A CEO consults with HR to discuss redesigning the structure of an underperforming department. Which information is necessary for HR to provide effective guidance?

Answers

- ○ The expense and revenue-per-employee metrics
- ○ The structure of the department in key competitors
- ◉ The competency gap that is impacting overall effectiveness
- ○ The average years of tenure for each employee

Question 100 of 134
Item shrm5694

Which action should an HR professional primarily consider when designing an organization whose strategy focuses on product differentiation?

Answers

- ○ Implementing compensation programs that reward efficiency and cost savings
- ○ Selecting job candidates with a strong understanding of the unique characteristics of its target market
- ◉ Implementing compensation programs that reward creativity and innovation
- ○ Selecting job candidates with skills in building strong provider/consumer relationships

Question 101 of 134
Item shrm5734

Which is the primary difference between task roles and maintenance roles?

Answers

- ◉ Level of experience required
- ○ Intended purpose
- ○ Effectiveness
- ○ Number of individuals involved

Question 102 of 134
Item shrm5662

Which is the first step toward effective workforce management that ensures the strategic allocation of people and resources in an organization to optimize productivity and reduce risk?

Answers

- ○ Assess the competencies required to support and grow the organization then identify gaps and misalignment of staffing levels.
- ◉ Forecast future workforce needs and plan strategies to develop relevant competencies that support the organization's goals and objectives.
- ○ Administer and support approaches that ensure the organization's long-term leadership needs are met.
- ○ Provide employees with continuous learning opportunities, including opportunities for upskilling and reskilling.

Question 103 of 134
Item shrm5670

Which is a likely consequence when a team consists of both full-time employees and gig workers?

Answers

- ○ Full-time employees will face challenges communicating with gig workers across the generational divide.
- ○ Full-time employees will request to become gig workers.
- ◉ Full-time employees will need to take on the role of coach and connector for the gig workers on the team.
- ○ Full-time employee benefits and perks will need to be offered to the gig workers on the team.

Question 104 of 134
Item shrm5738

A company currently has 500 employees, $10 million annual revenue, and produces 250,000 products per year. It has a goal to increase products made by 50% over the next two years. Using ratio analysis, how many employees do they need to hire to meet their goal?

Answers

- ○ 50
- ○ 125
- ◉ 250
- ○ 500

Question 105 of 134
Item shrm5750

A company is planning to expand operations and is assessing the current business in relation to where the business needs to be to achieve the expansion parameters. Which type of analysis is being conducted?

Answers

- ○ Benchmarking
- ◉ Gap
- ○ Balanced scorecard
- ○ Six-sigma

Question 106 of 134
Item shrm5751

Which is the most effective training method for adult learners?

Answers

- ◉ Experience-based learning
- ○ Classroom demonstrations
- ○ Webinars
- ○ Workbook exercises

Question 107 of 134
Item shrm5655

An employee posts on social media complaining about working conditions at the employee's place of employment. Which action should the employer take?

Answers

- ○ Determine areas for improvement in the workplace.
- ○ Deny the employee future promotions.
- ○ Restrict social media use on the employee's computer.
- ◉ Explain to the employee why work-related posts are unacceptable.

Question 108 of 134
Item shrm5692

Which approach should an HR manager use to prevent retaliation for reporting policy violations among employees?

Answers

- ○ Conciliation
- ◉ Whistleblower protection
- ○ Verbal warning
- ○ Investigation

Question 109 of 134
Item shrm5702

An employee has consistently arrived late to work, and this has negatively affected customer service. The manager has counseled the employee to determine the reason and has reinforced the importance of coming to work on time, but the lateness continues. Which is an appropriate next step?

Answers

- ○ Suspend the employee for a period of one week.
- ○ Change the employee's work schedule.
- ◉ Issue a written warning.
- ○ Issue a documented verbal warning.

Question 110 of 134
Item shrm5703

Which statement describes the alternative dispute resolution technique of mediation?

Answers

- ○ Representatives of disputing parties negotiate an agreement on behalf of the disputing parties.
- ○ Impartial third party makes an advisory or non-binding resolution after hearing arguments by disputing parties.
- ○ Disputing parties present a dispute to a group or panel of fellow employees for a resolution.
- ◉ Impartial third party assists the disputing parties in voluntarily reaching an acceptable resolution.

Question 111 of 134
Item shrm5713

Contract negotiations have stalled in a unionized organization. The organization and the union wish to continue their collaborative relationship, and the facts of the negotiated topic are well understood. Which alternative dispute resolution method is most appropriate?

Answers

- ◉ Mediation
- ○ Binding arbitration
- ○ Fact-finding
- ○ Non-binding arbitration

Question 112 of 134
Item shrm5721

After a charge of harassment has been substantiated, which next step should the HR manager take?

Answers

- ◉ Train leadership on managing employee claims of harassment.
- ○ Train employees on harassment prevention.
- ○ Administer corrective action to the employee.
- ○ Inform employees of the harassment policy.

Question 113 of 134
Item shrm5745

Which is the best way for a business to operate without misrepresenting its workforce?

Answers

- ○ Ensure the work of employees and independent contractors are equally reviewed.
- ○ Hire independent contractors to provide the primary services or products of the employer.
- ◉ Manage employees differently from independent contractors but ensure policies are followed by all.
- ○ Employ independent contractors to work alongside employees if a staffing shortage exists.

Question 114 of 134
Item shrm5660

While evaluating critical functions needed in case of an emergency, how could using the political, economic, social, technological, legal, and environmental analysis model help HR identify potential technology risks?

Answers

- ○ By scanning external emerging technologies for potential security threats
- ○ By alerting management to gaps in the competitors' technology procedures
- ○ By analyzing future technology for gaps in security procedures
- ◉ By assisting HR in identifying gaps in technology training

Question 115 of 134
Item shrm5669

An HR specialist is developing a platform to remotely deliver training. The training needs to include tools such as chat, email, and presentation sharing. Which method is the most appropriate for the situation?

Answers

- ○ Computer-based training
- ○ Educational podcast
- ◉ Distance learning
- ○ Hybrid learning

Question 116 of 134
Item shrm5688

An organization is integrating an HRIS database of 45,000 employees with an additional HRIS containing data on another 35,000 employees. Other than HR and IT experts on the team, which team expertise should be included for the successful transition?

Answers

- ◉ Project management
- ○ Cost audit
- ○ Quality control
- ○ Financial management

Question 117 of 134
Item shrm5737

In an attempt to reduce costs, a company moved its help desk operation overseas. What is this practice called?

Answers

- ◉ Offshoring
- ○ Strategic shift
- ○ Outsourcing
- ○ Reorganization

Question 118 of 134
Item shrm5749

A mobility manager is designing a strategy for transferring key employees to a new international office location. Which external factor most influences the strategy?

Answers

- ○ Immigration policy and visa options for highly skilled workers
- ◉ Availability of local talent matching new office roles' requirements
- ○ Budget planning and forecasting for the talent transfer
- ○ Cultural and regional differences between the two locations

Question 119 of 134
Item shrm5753

A multinational firm has deployed an expatriate to another country where the firm does not have any legal presence. Which risk should the HR manager consider when processing the expatriate's payroll from headquarters?

Answers

- ○ Reputation/goodwill
- ○ Permanent establishment
- ◉ Immigration
- ○ Supply chain

Question 120 of 134
Item shrm5652

An organization suffers a severe loss when a natural disaster damages the corporate headquarters and causes the business to be shut down. Which type of proactive plan prevents this type of situation?

Answers

- ○ Social media response plan
- ○ Rapid response plan
- ○ Emergency evacuation plan
- ◉ Business continuity plan

Question 121 of 134
Item shrm5671

A management team has identified risks that may impede the company from reaching its corporate objectives. What is the next step in the enterprise risk management process?

Answers

- ○ Establish and implement policies and procedures to carry out risk responses.
- ○ Monitor enterprise risk management issues and modify them as necessary.
- ○ Identify internal and external events that could affect the company achieving its goals.
- ◉ Analyze risks and potential impacts to the company and how each should be addressed.

Question 122 of 134
Item shrm5690

Which is a response strategy to adverse risks in an organization?

Answers

- ◉ Avoid
- ○ Accept
- ○ Share
- ○ Enable

Question 123 of 134
Item shrm5693

An organization takes precautions to protect employees from injury and ensure their health and well-being. This is an example of which practice?

Answers

- ○ Duty of care
- ○ Risk analysis
- ○ Duty of safety
- ◉ Contingency planning

Question 124 of 134
Item shrm5704

An employee has been absent and late to work several times over the last few months. Upon further investigation, it is revealed that the employee has been using illicit substances. Which approach would have been most effective at detecting the issue early?

Answers

- ○ Offering employee assistant program services to employees dealing with illicit substance use
- ◉ Conducting periodic substance use testing and administering a management training on illicit substance use
- ○ Including pre-employment substance use testing and using the results as a condition of employment
- ○ Distributing brochures to all employees emphasizing the dangers of illicit substance use

Question 125 of 134
Item shrm5708

A company's chief operating officer was injured in an accident and will be out of work for several months. The company has a contingency plan but it is lacking several key elements. Which action should the HR manager take first to effectively address this situation?

Answers

- ◉ Establish a quarterly review process of the contingency plan with key employees to ensure it is updated frequently.
- ○ Schedule a meeting with key employees to review and update the contingency plan once company operations are stable.
- ○ Communicate the contingency plan with all company employees and train them on their individual roles and responsibilities.
- ○ Email all key employees to review and update their portion of the contingency plan by week's end.

Question 126 of 134
Item shrm5711

Which activity should an HR manager complete first to develop a plan for identifying and mitigating macro-level risk factors in an organization?

Answers

- (●) Analyze patterns in key positions with high turnover via exit interviews.
- ( ) Review historical deliverable inconsistencies of the organization's supply chain partners.
- ( ) Redesign compensation packages to become a competitive employer for specialized talent.
- ( ) Monitor current economic and global trends to forecast potential business disruption.

Question 127 of 134
Item shrm5654

What organizational outcome occurs when an organization shifts its corporate social responsibility (CSR) commitment from a philanthropic viewpoint to a shared value viewpoint?

Answers

- (●) The organization integrates business goals with CSR efforts.
- ( ) Any at-fault mindset hindering employee performance disappears.
- ( ) Stock prices and shareholder return on investment both increase as a result.
- ( ) Stakeholders believe more value per dollar invested is attained.

Question 128 of 134
Item shrm5661

Which should be implemented to help an organization achieve a high quality of life for employees and the community in which the organization operates?

Answers

- ( ) Growth-share matrix prioritization
- ( ) Change management training
- ( ) Realistic job previews
- (●) Sustainability initiatives

Question 129 of 134
Item shrm5664

A company that helps clients find candidates for environmental jobs would like to incorporate community involvement into the workday for its employees. Which program would be the most financially beneficial and justify the employees' time spent out of the office and in the community?

Answers

- ( ) Develop a relationship with a homeless shelter that provides job-readiness training for out-of-work adults.
- ( ) Coordinate a clothing collection drive to prepare people for job interviews and other professional opportunities.
- (●) Organize a community event that educates children about jobs in natural sciences.
- ( ) Provide an educational scholarship to help underprivileged children attend college.

Question 130 of 134
Item shrm5699

What theory are the values of corporate social responsibility based on?

Answers

- ( ) Organizational theory
- ( ) Stakeholder theory
- (●) Shareholder theory
- ( ) Strategic theory

Question 131 of 134
Item shrm5740

An HR manager is tasked with developing a corporate social responsibility and sustainability program. Which action should the HR manager take to implement the program?

Answers

- ○ Advise managers to develop and oversee programs for their respective departments.
- ○ Work with stakeholders to implement a strategy across the organization.
- ○ Issue a memo to employees that outlines the program and expectations.
- ◉ Hire a consultant skilled in this area to lead the program.

Question 132 of 134
Item shrm5653

A company that uses personality assessments to determine employee promotions finds that there are lower rates of promotion for employees from protected groups. Which is the greatest legal risk?

Answers

- ○ Bias vulnerability
- ○ Adverse employment decisions
- ○ Disparate impact
- ◉ Reverse discrimination

Question 133 of 134
Item shrm5667

A department manager sees a social media post where several employees are discussing their dislike for mandatory overtime. The manager is upset and wants to formally document the behavior of the employees. How should the HR manager advise the department manager?

Answers

- ○ Talk to each employee who engaged in the discussion because employees should have no expectations of privacy while working for the company.
- ◉ Encourage the manager to meet with each employee who engaged in the discussion and actively discourage union-forming activities with the NLRB.
- ○ Inform the manager that employees have the right to discuss their work conditions when off-duty under the NLRA and cannot be disciplined.
- ○ Permit the manager to document only the employee who made the initial post because the other employees did not initiate it.

Question 134 of 134
Item shrm5700

Which is a primary difference between the EPA and the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act of 2009?

Answers

- ○ The EPA prohibits pay discrimination on the basis of gender; the Ledbetter pay law outlines the timeframe in which a claim of pay discrimination may be filed.
- ○ The EPA requires employers to pay a fair and prevailing wage; the Ledbetter pay law requires an employer to disclose wages paid.
- ◉ The EPA requires employers to pay equal wages for the same work in the same location; the Ledbetter pay law modifies the EPA by dropping the location requirement.
- ○ The EPA prohibits pay discrimination on the basis of gender, age, or disability; the Ledbetter pay law outlines the sanctions employers face for findings of pay discrimination.